Students use their third and fourth years of study to deepen their understanding of management. Students enjoy a range of course choices among upper-level topics and choose courses that are of most interest to them, enabling either focused preparation for a specific career path, generalized studies to expand breadth of knowledge or to set the stage for advanced studies. Students are free to choose any set of elective courses, so long as they meet course prerequisites and the degree requirements.

The program intensifies with the Management 490 Capstone course, a hands-on learning experience that features student teams addressing problems facing partner organizations and driving real-life solutions.
